Proceeding Number: FCC’s Docket 25-133 (DA 25-219)

This is a response to the FCC’s Docket 25-133 (DA 25-219) and the existing Amateur Radio Regulations.

I have been an Amateur Radio Operator since 1964. The existing rules and regulations for the Amateur Radio operation have, in my opinion been sufficient for the continued regulations as they are today. Those of us that have been Volunteer Examiners have always followed the regulations set up by your commission.

If we relax the Rules and Regulations, we are creating a situation where many unqualified persons may obtain Amateur Radio licenses. We are a proud group of operators that do our best to follow all of the commission’s regulations. In my opinion, the distribution of radio frequencies for Amateur Radio use should be left as they are. The fraternity of Amateur Radio operators still do much experimentation and many of our experiments have led to modern communications methods.

Why modify something that seems to work. I do not want to see Amateur Radio disappear due to rules and regulations that are working and keep our fraternity of loyal and helpful operators doing what we do best. When there is a disaster situation, Amateur Radio is there!!

Please retain ALL current frequency allocations and maintain tiered licensing for the Amateur Radio Service.

Thank you,

Gary (K1MQ) and Eileen (W1NYC) Awsiukiewicz
